

ALEXANDRIA.

MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 1.

AT THE grand Blaine demonstration in New York last Saturday night one of the orators who evoked loud applause was a colored man named Derrick, who said:

"It is the old fight between the North and the South, only in a new form. The South, having failed to get free trade with the bayonet, is now trying to get it by the silent method of the Mills bill. Formerly the South had the black slave which the free trade to make slaves of the white men of the North, the men and the sons of men who fought and bled to maintain the Stars and Stripes, and not the Stars and Bars. It was the democratic party that tried to keep the colored race in chains, and I, as the representative of that race, ask: 'Have we any thing to thank the democracy for?' I say no, but the republican party, which gave us freedom, do and therefore I urge them to support and therefore I urge them to vote for the friends of liberty, Harrison and Morton and Miller and Cruger."

In the newspaper report of the speech, the above quoted paragraph is described as received with loud and prolonged applause by the immense audience. Such speeches and the favor that greets them in the North may make votes for Mr. Harrison in that section, but they can hardly be expected to produce a similar effect in the South. It seems, however, from the manner in which the republican campaign is being conducted, that the managers of that campaign have abandoned all hope of success in any part of the South, and have concentrated their efforts upon the four northern States that gave democratic majorities four years ago.

EX CONGRESSMAN Finerty, of Chicago, formerly a rank Irish-American democrat, who he flopped some years ago because the democrats of his city would not renominate him, was one of the speakers at last Saturday night's Blaine meeting in New York. In his speech he said:

"And when you come right down to the kno nothing business you will find on inspection that the weight of the know nothing cry was always raised south of the Ohio and west of the Potomac river, right in the Southern States themselves, and the places in which the grossest outrages were committed upon foreigners and Catholics were the three democratic cities of Baltimore, Louisville and New Orleans. These are historical facts."

Now, Mr. Finerty must be very ignorant of the subject about what he was talking, or else presumed upon the ignorance of his hearers, for nothing in recent history is better known than the fact that know-nothingism took its rise in the North, and that it swept southward with almost unresisted fury until it was dashed to pieces against the stone wall which the democrats of Virginia had erected against it, and from which they poured such a deadly volley into its ranks that it fell back routed and dismayed, and so utterly demoralized that it never rallied again. Oh, no, Mr. Finerty, the North must bear all the odium that may be attached to know-nothingism; the South, all the praise that may belong to its death and burial. Mr. Finerty should read up or hush up.

MR. BLAINE says: "It never occurred to Mr. Jefferson's mind that it would be a wise policy for the government or an advantageous one to the people to loan the Treasury surplus to a few favorite banks, as the administration of President Cleveland has done." This is probably true, but surely Mr. Blaine has not forgotten the fact that when Mr. Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury, one bank, the one that gentleman was interested in, was allowed to borrow more of the Treasury surplus than any ten of them have done under Mr. Cleveland's administration.

GENERAL MAHONEY has issued an order to the republicans in the Petersburg district to vote for Arnold, his white candidate for Congress, and against Langston, the colored republican candidate, and the favorite of his race, who compose ninety-nine hundredths of the republican party in that district. Whether his order will be obeyed or not is unknown and will remain so some time longer, for the General has been recognized so long by the negroes of Virginia as their master, that it will be right hard for them to renounce their slavery.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND says, "every citizen should be regarded as a thoughtful, responsible voter." But the President, as a man of the world, must know that not one half of the citizens of this country are either thoughtful or responsible voters. Why, therefore, they should be regarded as such is hard to tell. Indeed, it is doubtful if Mr. Cleveland, if asked the direct question, would answer that half the "citizens" of South Carolina and Louisiana should be regarded as "thoughtful, responsible voters."

MR. BLAINE persists in the reiteration of his assertion that Mr. Jefferson was opposed to a tax on liquor. Mr. Blaine, as a well informed man, should know that Mr. Jefferson is on record as favoring a tax on liquor, both as a moral and as a revenue measure. To those not acquainted with Mr. Blaine's tricks, his failure to mention, in his history of the tariff, the letter in which Mr. Jefferson advocates a liquor tax is considered remarkable.

A package containing $5,800 was mislaid shortly after the National Bank of the Republic at New York was opened Saturday morning. One of the tellers ascribed had turned the money over to another teller, but search failed to reveal the whereabouts of the package.

From Washington

(Special Correspondence of the ALEX. GAZETTE.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1, 1888.

The democrats of this city, or rather some of them, lay the blame of the fraudulent work on the new aqueduct here, upon the administration, which, they say, has retained as engineers in charge of that work the men appointed by republican administrations. They say that though the administration was elected upon the distinct promise that promise has not been fulfilled, and that in every case in which an examination has been made the necessity for such an overhauling has been demonstrated.

Mr. Pruden, the President's secretary, being asked to day if the President had signed the bill for the payment of the claim of Mrs. Laura E. Maddox, of Alexandria, replied that he had not, and that the bill had not yet reached him.

Mr. Dudley, ex-commissioner of pensions, and chief agent of the national republican committee, was at the Capitol to-day and had interviews with many of the republican Congressmen. From the fact that they all met him with smiles but left him with frowns, it is surmised that he called either to demand large contributions or to impart other disagreeable information.

In the Senate to-day Mr. Hale, republican of Maine, introduced a resolution in relation to the recent order of General Benet, chief of ordnance, to the commanders of the armories, directing them to favor democrats in the employment and discharge of employees, and calling for a particularized statement of the removals made under such order. Mr. Hale ridiculed the civil service reform of the recent administration, and called attention to the fact of the great difference between its public expressions on that subject and its private acts, (as the order referred to was marked confidential) as illustrated by the order.

It is said here that Mr. Blaine was instructed by the national republican committee before he spoke in New York last Saturday night that he must eschew his favorite subject of trusts, and that it was with that distinct understanding that he spoke then and will speak hereafter.

There are 325 members of the House, but only 25 were present to-day were about 65, of whom 25 were republicans and 40 democrats, and it is doubtful if that number will be increased during the remainder of the session. Several of the absentees of both parties are in Virginia to-day making speeches at the several county courts there, among them Mr. Speaker Carlisle, who spoke at Lexington, and Messrs. McCrue, of Arkansas, dem., and Kerr, rep., of Iowa, who had a discussion at Spotsylvania C. H. It has been pretty well determined that there will be no adjournment until after the election, though both houses will probably take a recess shortly before the day of election in order to allow the few members who may be here at that time and the employees of both houses to go home to vote.

Messrs. George E. Duffy and J. Keith Norton, of Alexandria, called upon Representative Lee, of that district, at the Capitol to-day, with reference to the Congressman to speak at the democratic meeting to be held in Alexandria next Friday night.

Representative Allen, of Mississippi, who sustained the democratic side of the political discussion that took place at Falls Church last Saturday, says that though the affair was a negro barbeque, and that most of the crowd there was composed of negroes, every thing went off smoothly and to him, at least, perfectly satisfactorily, barring the beating a negro, who had the temerity to proclaim himself a democrat, received at the hands of his own race. Mr. Allen says democratic speeches don't have much effect upon negroes, and have long since been abandoned in his State, but that as Virginia is so close to Washington it may be that they cannot be avoided.

The President returned the Chinese exclusion bill to both houses of Congress to-day with his approval, but with the recommendation for the enactment of such legislation as will prevent the landing of such Chinese as are now on their way here, who may be provided with such certificates as were requisite for that purpose before the enactment of the bill, and also to appropriate a sufficient indemnity for the injuries the Chinese have received at the hands of American mobs. After some adverse criticism by Senators Sherman, Hale, Dolph and other republicans, the message was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The betting in New York is all one way, the odds being in favor of Cleveland at about $100 to $80.

The contradictory tactics of republican leaders and Chairman Quay's curious campaign methods are construed as signs of weakness.

J. T. Nutter, of Craig county, was on Saturday nominated by the democratic convention in Salem to represent Roanoke and Craig counties in the next Legislature, to fill the unexpired term of the late Giles C. Hoffman.

The republican rally in New York on Saturday night was an immense affair. Mr. Blaine was principal speaker. While Gov. Foraker was speaking the crowd shouted for Blaine so lustily that he stopped and Mr. Blaine appeared and addressed the assembly. It was estimated that there was 30,000 people present.

Yellow Fever.

There were 79 new cases of yellow fever reported at Jacksonville yesterday—only 13 whites. There were six deaths. Total number of cases 2,626. Total number of deaths 255. There were six deaths Saturday.

A special from Ferdinand says: "Twenty-five cases of all kinds under treatment. All doing well."

A dispatch from Tallahassee denies a rumor of yellow fever there. There is not even a suspicion of it.

The effect of cold weather is beneficial as regards the suppression of the disease, but is not beneficial for the persons under treatment.

Mrs. Lizzie Dewolf, a refugee from Decatur, Ala., died at Rockford, Ill., yesterday, of yellow fever.

The Norwegian brig Hardi, from Guantanamo, Cuba, for Boston, arrived at Delaware Breakwater Saturday in a helpless condition. Three sailors died of yellow fever on the voyage, and the other men were sick and so delirious that it was hard to keep them on board.

A man named James Oswald left Jacksonville nearly a month ago, after having been quarantined for ten days, and made his way to Baltimore, but the authorities there refused to allow him to enter the city. He returned to Washington, arriving there yesterday morning, where he was found at the Baltimore and Ohio depot, suffering with what is thought to be yellow fever. He was taken to the Workhouse hospital, where his case will be carefully watched.

C., in the black district, where the negroes outnumber the whites three to one, say that the negroes are organizing and threatening the whites, and that they are marching through the country with a band of music, banners and shotguns, alarming the whites to that extent that several families have left their homes and others are fearfully frightened.

Chester, Pa., has been thrown into a state of excitement over the unearthing of the skeleton of a baby and some of the bones of a full-grown person in the cellar of a house recently demolished, but which was once occupied by persons who bore an unenviable reputation, and the popular impression is that a bloody tragedy was enacted on the premises.

A dispatch from Valparaiso, via Galveston, says: "The Transandine Telegraph Company will open to the public its new direct telegraph line between Valparaiso and Buenos Ayres to-day. This is an iron pole line in connection with forty miles of cable laid under the perpetual snows of the Andes, and will insure communication between Buenos Ayres and London, via Galveston, inside of one and one-half hours."

Mr. Robert Garrett, while reading a news paper at Ringwood, N. J., yesterday, was suddenly seized with a fit of violence, and tore the newspaper in small pieces and scattered them about the ground. His screams could be heard all over the neighborhood. When his attendants attempted to lead him into the house he struggled with them and pulled off his coat and threw it to the ground. He was finally gotten into the house before he did himself any body harm.

One of the women, Mrs. Margaret Haydon, lost her life. They were attempting to cross the river from Middlesex in a heavy wind when the accident occurred. One of the women that was saved is lying at the point of death.

Norfolk society is agitated over the elopement of Miss Lillie B. Leigh with Mr. Geoffrey Morgan, son of Sir Walter Morgan, late L. C. Pullin, who resides near the base of Jack Mountain, attempted to follow older children of the same family who started to go to a mountain field about a mile distant to get some corn, and, losing its way, wandered into the mountain. About three hours later the child was missed, and search about the premises was immediately instituted and continued until nightfall without success. Meanwhile forty or fifty men with lanterns joined in the search, which was continued until sunrise next day, when the child was found about one and a half miles from his home.

Gauged his Eyes Out.

MATTOON, Ill., Oct. 1.—Peter Straub, a Chicago machinist, came to Mattoon Friday. About 9 o'clock Saturday night he became possessed of the hallucination of being controlled by spirits and at their command danced until two o'clock Sunday morning when he fled from his room without coat, hat or shoes to get away from them. When he stopped to recover his waning vigor he was again surrounded by millions of spirits. In appealing tones he said: "What can I do to induce you to cease your torture?" The spirits said, "Tear out your eyes." He replied, "I have but one good eye and do not want to lose it." They were inexorable, however, and insisted on the execution of their demand. He then ran the forefinger of each hand into the sockets and gouged his eyes out. He was found yesterday morning in a state of insensibility, three-fourths of a mile from his boarding house. He presented a ghastly appearance. Physicians placed the balls in their proper position, but on account of inflammation it was impossible to determine whether the sight of the good eye was injured or not.

WENONA, Ill., Oct. 1.—It has just been learned that a dandish attempt to wreck a heavily loaded excursion train was made on the Dwight branch of the Chicago & Alton road last Wednesday night between Wenona and Lacone. It was discovered by the engineer just in time to avoid another Chatsworth horror.

MISS PEACOCK'S TALE.—Miss Ida Peacock, of Jersey City, amazed her friends of St. Paul's M. E. congregation some days ago by exhibiting a parcel of annoying letters which she said she had received. One note, she declared, had come to her while she was sitting in church. Without her knowledge detectives set to work and soon found that Miss Ida had written the letters to herself. She turns out to be "queer." Some of the people seen by the police told strange stories, one relating that Miss Peacock had said that she had accidentally swallowed a pair of scissors and lived on raw buckwheat till she got rid of them. At the meeting of the official board of St. Paul's Church on Tuesday night the case of Miss Peacock and her letters was considered and the following resolution passed with fervor: Resolved, That the official board would rather have a flock of crows roost in the choir gallery than have Miss Peacock any longer spread her tale in our church.

THE BIG CHICAGO WHEAT CORNER.—The Chicago wheat corner was the main topic discussed by the Baltimore grain trade on Saturday. Hutchinson, the Chicago manipulator, had the Saturday shorts in his grip, and dispatched the fall of the excitement that prevailed. Some wheat was sold at $2. Hutchinson is to fix to-day the settling prices for September deals, and he is quoted as saying that he will not be too hard on the shorts, which they interpret to mean that he will let them off at less than $2 a bushel. In this great gambling deal fortunes were made and lost, and the speculation in wheat has been carried to such abnormal proportions that there has been no trading in the seaboard cities worthy of the name. In the Baltimore market on Saturday wheat was firm.—Baltimore Sun.

It did the work.
